President's Message

Building Ourselves to Build Others

Last month, my message was about ways to build others up. While I am confident that supporting each other is integral to the success of our organization and our profession, I also know that it's not always easy to build others up when we're struggling just to keep our own heads above water. People are stressed out and stretched thin at work, at home, or are dealing with a seemingly insurmountable number of stressors in both their personal and professional lives. During these times, we tend to live life on autopilot, reacting quickly and not thinking about the impact our actions, words, and tone of voice have on ourselves and on others.

We all know about the adverse impacts of stress on our health and happiness, and we've all heard about mindfulness. Mindfulness involves consciously attending to our experiences — our thoughts, feelings, sensations or surroundings — with interest and kindness.

Mindfulness helps you take care of yourself first so you can better care for others. This doesn't just apply to medicine. Each day we all make connections with our friends, family, co-workers and even strangers on the street. How we interact with them comes from within. Taking time to care for ourselves, quieting our minds and focusing in on a moment, can help us better connect with ourselves and with others, making us healthier and happier.

Mindfulness is about being aware of and controlling your experience. No, we don't have control over everything in life but we have 100% control of how we react to what happens to us. I started learning how to practice mindfulness a short 2 years ago and it has changed both my personal and professional lives for the better. If I can do it, anybody can.

My challenge for you this month is to take the first step in practicing mindfulness. That first step for me involved using an app called Calm. If an app wouldn't be helpful for you, there are so many other suggestions out there that you can personalize. In the meantime, here are some tips from mindful.org to get you started.

What You Need to Know Before Practicing Mindfulness

1. You don't need to buy anything. You can practice anywhere, there's no need to go out and buy a special cushion or bench—all you need is to devote a little time and space to accessing your mindfulness skills every day.

2. There's no way to quiet your mind. That's not the goal here. There's no bliss state or otherworldly communion. All you're trying to do is pay attention to the present moment, without judgment. Sounds easy, right?

3. Your mind will wander. As you practice paying attention to what's going on in your body and mind at the present moment, you'll find that many thoughts arise. Your mind might drift to something that happened yesterday, meander to your to-do list—your mind will try to be anywhere but where you are. But the wandering mind isn't something to fear, it's part of human nature and it provides the magic moment for the essential piece of

Legislative Report by Nathalie Walker, MBA, RN, CNOR

Research conducted during the past four decades has demonstrated that surgical smoke generated from the use of energy-generating devices in surgery contains toxic and biohazardous substances that present risks to perioperative team members and patients. Despite the increase in information available, however, perioperative personnel continue to demonstrate a lack of knowledge of these hazards and lack of compliance with recommendations for evacuating smoke during surgical procedures. The new AORN 'Guideline for surgical smoke safety' provides guidance on surgical smoke management. This article focuses on key points of the guideline to help perioperative personnel promote smoke-free work environments; evacuate surgical smoke; and develop education programs and competency verification tools, policies and procedures, and quality improvement initiatives related to controlling surgical smoke. Perioperative RNs should review the complete guideline for additional information and for guidance when writing and updating policies and procedures. AORN J 105 (May 2017) 488-497. ^a AORN, Inc, 2017.

<https://link.zixcentral.com/u/20d02848/XDRn5Q2s6RG4lXjnWbBoUw?u=http%3A%2F%2Fdx.doi.org%2F10.1016%2Fj.aorn.2017.03.006> Key words: surgical smoke, surgical plume, smoke evacuation, respiratory protection.

Does OSHA mandate the evacuation of surgical smoke?

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) does not have a specific standard that requires the evacuation of surgical smoke. Under the General Duty Clause, Section 5(a)(1) of the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970, employers are required to provide their employees with a place of employment that is “free from recognizable hazards that are causing or likely to cause death or serious harm to employees.”

Hospitals are not really smoke free.

Surgical Smoke is full of carcinogenic and mutagenic cells, and can include over 150 hazardous chemicals. Like cigarette smoke, surgical smoke can be seen and smelled. It is the result of human tissue contact with mechanical tools and/or heat producing devices, such as lasers and electro-surgical knives commonly used for dissection and hemostasis. It is estimated that 90% of all surgical procedures generate surgical smoke. This affects everyone in Operating Rooms, Patients and Surgical Staff alike. Rhode Island and Colorado have addressed smoke evacuation by law to ensure operating rooms are surgical smoke free.

Get ready, Louisiana Nurses—we're going to be moving this agenda forward, too! As chair of our legislative committee I will take the lead on this project to coordinate our efforts. My goal is to have at least one person from each chapter work on this committee. We'll be working via email the majority of the time. I'll share info and we'll discuss which will be on January 11th, 2020.

Community Service Projects:

At every AORN meeting, along with collecting toiletries, eyeglasses, socks, etc. for the New Orleans Rebuild Center for the homeless, the chapter will be collecting food for Second Harvest. Second Harvest accepts nearly all types of food products (nonperishable items and produce). They prefer non-glass containers for safety reasons. Please consider nutritional food items that are low in sodium/salt.

Don't worry... if you forget to bring food, you can give money. Sharon Guardina will buy your food items and bring all food items to a food harvest center every month.

Our chapter is also exploring other options for community service. Here are some suggestions:

New Orleans Medical Mission
Habitat for Humanity
Making Sleeping Bags for the Homeless
Feeding the Homeless at a Shelter

- Nathalie Walker will obtain information on local Habitat for Humanity projects.
- New Orleans Medical Mission has opportunities for participation on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

Rebooting Our Reprocessing Department
 A comprehensive rethink of decontamination and sterilization helped this facility cut SPD-related patient safety events by 90%.

This article appeared in the July 2019 edition of OR Today and was written by our very own president-elect, Judy Montello. The entire article is attached to the newsletter email.

Chapter 1902- Legislative Chair

- Treasurer’s Report – Melissa Guidry reported deposits of $200 bringing the balance in the chapter account to $5113.60. The required 990 tax form for exempt organizations was filed with the IRS.
- Legislative Report – Nathalie Walker discussed smoke evacuation legislation as the legislative focus for the next year. Send the names of any physician smoke evacuation champions in your facility to Nathalie; also send the name of any staff member in your facility who has health (respiratory) problems related to surgical smoke.

Job Posting Discussion: A discussion of the possibility of including open jobs in the newsletter. If a facility has open positions that they would like chapter members to know about, send the information to Carrie Simpson ahead of time. The position could be mentioned at the end of the chapter meeting. More discussion will take place.

Open Discussion:

- The AORN, Inc. national ballot has been published.
- Sharon Guardina suggested that the Board consider revising the “Treasury Standing Rules.” These will be sent out with the Bylaws for review.
- Nora Lambert suggested a fundraising idea for the chapter to consider. Rada Cutlery catalogs will be brought to the August meeting for additional discussion. There is cost to the chapter.

Adjournment: With no further business, the meeting was adjourned at 6:12PM. Member networking followed the Board meeting.

mindfulness practice—the piece that researchers believe leads to healthier, more agile brains: the moment when you recognize that your mind has wandered. Because if you can notice that your mind has wandered, then you can consciously bring it back to the present moment. The more you do this, the more likely you are to be able to do it again and again. And that beats walking around on autopilot any day (ie: getting to your destination without remembering the drive, finding yourself with your hand in the bottom of a chip bag you only meant to snack a little from, etc.).

4. Your judgy brain will try to take over. The second part of the puzzle is the “without judgment” part. We’re all guilty of listening to the critic in our heads a little more than we should. (That critic has saved us from disaster quite a few times.) But, when we practice investigating our judgments and diffusing them, we can learn to choose how we look at things and react to them. When you practice mindfulness, try not to judge yourself for whatever thoughts pop up. Notice judgments arise, make a mental note of them (some people label them “thinking”), and let them pass, recognizing the sensations they might leave in your body, and letting those pass as well.

5. It's all about returning your attention again and again to the present moment. It seems like our minds are wired to get carried away in thought. That's why mindfulness is the practice of returning, again and again, to the breath. We use the sensation of the breath as an anchor to the present moment. And every time we return to the breath, we reinforce our ability to do it again. Call it a bicep curl for your brain.

How to Practice Mindfulness

While mindfulness might seem simple, it's not necessarily all that easy. The real work is to make time every day to just keep doing it. Here's a short practice to get you started:

- 1. Take a seat. Find a place to sit that feels calm and quiet to you.
- 2. Set a time limit. If you're just beginning, it can help to choose a short time, such as 5 or 10 minutes.
- 3. Notice your body. You can sit in a chair with your feet on the floor, you can sit loosely cross-legged, in lotus posture, you can kneel—all are fine. Just make sure you are stable and in a position you can stay in for a while.
- 4. Feel your breath. Follow the sensation of your breath as it goes out and as it goes in.
- 5. Notice when your mind has wandered. Inevitably, your attention will leave the sensations of the breath and wander to other places. When you get around to noticing this—in a few seconds, a minute, five minutes—simply return your attention to the breath.
- 6. Be kind to your wandering mind. Don't judge yourself or obsess over the content of the thoughts you find yourself lost in. Just come back.

That's it! That's the practice. You go away, you come back, and you try to do it as kindly as possible.
